

In the specification:

An attached clean copy of a substitute application is provided and a marked-up version showing the changes made is also provided. The substitute specification includes no new matter. The original specification was provided with lots of pseudo code which is understandable to those skilled in the art. The changes made are in the interest of providing more background, clearer phraseology and to aid a reader in understanding the invention. The substitute specification is also provided to aid the PTO in finding the locations of the changes and to provide paragraph numbers.
